

Clarkson University | Social Entrepreneurship

When: 27-05-2024

Who: Clarkson University @REC Impact

What: Inspire a group of Master students with information on Social Entrepreneurship in Amsterdam and explain the role of REC Impact in promoting Impact through valorization.

About: Clarkson University is a private research university in upstate New York USA with a focus on interdisciplinary collaboration, innovative research and a great return on investment for students. As part of a business trip to Europe, a group from Clarkson University visited REC Impact to learn about our valorization program, startup ecosystem and the Amsterdam Centre for Entrepreneurship. Their visit centered around broadening the connection between society and the University and investing in student startups.

Take-out: During the visit the students got presentations about the startup ecosystem and social impact from the REC Impact director Erik Boer and Caempus Incubator Employee Maxime ten Brinke. Furthermore, Lisa Jukema presented her startup Anywyse and took the student on a journey on how they went through the funding process. Lastly, Ross Gordon from UvA Ventures gave a presentation on UvA Valorization systems and investments in student startups.
